ELINORE SISTERS IN MRS. DULANEY

The Vaudeville Headliners Make a Hit in Their Musical Comedy.

The Elinore Sisters have been favorites here in vaudeville; so the announcement that they were to appear at the Bijou that they were to appear at the Bijou in the musical comedy, "Mrs. Delaner, of Newport," was received with gratification by Bichmond theatre-goers, who proved that they had not forgotten this clever team by filling every seat last night in the Broad Street playhouse.

Kate and May Elinore work much as they aid in their vaudeville sketch, only they have surrounded themselves with a company of capable people and have been provided with a two-act piece which is a sort of crazy-quift affair, made up of some of the best things that have been done in vaudeville and in farce comedy. of some of the best things that have been done in vaudeville and in farce comedy. While "Mrs. Delaney, of Newport," cannot day claim to having anything new in its make-up, it certainly affords ample amusement, which was, of course, the object when it was placed before the public. The chorus is one of the best drilled and hardest working lot or girls seen upon 'he Bijou stage in many a day. There seems no end to the number of costumes they wear. The finale of the second act, when as "Uncle Sam's Girls" hey give an exhibition of sword-work, is bout as clever a thing as any chorus has

May Elinore, in her song, "Eyes of Irish Blue," stepped upon the stage look-ing for all the world like a smaller edi-tion of the late Bessie Bonnehill, and her work in that number reminded one very nuch of that elever artist. Kate Elinore, as the Irish washer-woman who has come into a fortune, makes the same hit that she did in vaude-ville.

The production was pleasing from first to last, and will form an excellent attraction for Thanksgiving week.

The Virginian.

The sale of seats for "The Virginian," which will be presented at the Academy this afternoon and to-night, indicated that one of the best audiences of the season will willoss this production. The that one of the best audiences of the season will witness this production. The play, as nearly every one knows, is a dramatization of the novel of the same name, but unlike many of the "book plays" which have been so much in vogue in recent years, it tells the story with fine dramatic force, and the plot can be inderstood without a knowledge of the years.

Dustin Farnum, in the lending role role, its a young actor, who has already won lids spurs, his work in "Angoca," having made his name generally known among theatre-goers. Mr. Farnum made a most decided impression in New York, when "The Virginiam" was produced there, He realizes to the fullest the author's conception of the character.

Mr. Farnum before the production of the plece last fall, visited Richmond with a view of studying the Virginia "dialect," and for many days he was wrestling with the pronunciation.

DR. HAWTHORNE'S VIVID WARNING

Closes the Last of a Series in His Sermon on Sunday.

'PURITY AND SOLIDITY"

This Must be the Basis of a Christian Life-Responsibility of Man.

Dr. J. B. Hawthorne, paster of Grove Avenue Baptist Church, preached Sunday a powerful sermon based on the sayings of Christ on the mount. This was the last of a series, which Dr. Hawthorne is preparing to publish in book form,

The subject of the discourse was Two Foundations-The True and the False." Dr. Hawthorne entered upon a discussion of the final words on the mount, saying that they contained the very quintescence of divine revelation, He said that the thought to which Christ gave the sublimest emphasis was purity and solidity of character-character based upon those great laws of the moral universe which he had proclaimed in his preaching and illustrated in his life. Christ was utterly intolerant of sham and pretense; there could be no Pharasalsm, life must be based on truthfuness and sincerity of thought. As in the physical world, so in the moral world laws are based on facts, and as such they must be reckoned with. There is not a mere basis of ideality in the Christian life; it is based on reality, which requires material and spiritual development on man's part. It is not enough for man to merely He said that the thought to which Christ It is not enough for man to merely Picture of the Builders. Dr. Hawthorne went on to give a pic-ture of the two builders—the one who built on a foundation of sand and the built on a foundation of sand and the one who built on a foundation of rock. He draws the obvious moral from this, and shows that the Christian life is not built on the surface, but that the man who wishes to live a Christian must delve deep down to find, the rock of the living faith. Life must be built on action and obedience. We must be doers of the word, faith. Life must be built on action and obedience. We must be doers of the word, and to be this we must follow with faith and obedience the divine law. Hearing alone will not save man; it is the doing of the divine will as found in the inspired book that forms the miracle of salvation. And without following the divine law man will be like the builder who found; a like week, morning and evening, at Grace Street Church.

The change was made in view of the fact that revival services are going on all the week, morning and evening, at Grace Street Church.

The arrangement will give Baptist people of the city an opportunity to hear Dr. Vines, who has recently come into the State. man is his own architect, and on him alone rests the responsibility of his life, alone rests the responsibility of his life, whether it shall be swept away by a great storm of temptation or weather the temptest and glide into the haven of eternal rest. Dr. Hawthorne closes with a terrible and vivid picture of death, the passing away of the lost soul, and asks what obsequies shall be held over the soul that goes down to eternal doom. And the moral is build one's life on the foundation of the living faith. foundation of the living faith them at 6 o'clock in the morning, h by he means lost interest for the public.

Mr. C. L. Pettit, in speaking of the matter last night, said that he was firmly opposed to the passage of such an ordiname. He said that no discrimination should be made between barrooms and other places of business. They have to pay a high license as it is, he continued, and as long as they pay this license and keep the city's laws no restraint should be placed on their business.

One constituent wanted his representative to offer an ordinance closing and opening oyster saloons at the same hours, because his son, by lonfing about them, had lost a good position. The natural inference would be, then, that all business places should be governed by the same ordinance for fear that they would exert a harmful influence over some idle loafer. Mr. Pettit said that he would fight the ordinance to the bitter end. He thought that there would be few voters in favor of it.
